The 6th International Workshop on Theoretical East Asian Linguistics (TEAL-6)

Date: August 15-16, 2010

Venue: Peking University, Beijing

“The Sixth International Workshop on Theoretical East Asian Linguistics” (TEAL-6) was held at Peking University, Beijing, China during August 15-16, 2010. The workshop was organized by The Hong Kong Polytechnic University-Peking University Research Centre on Chinese Linguistics, and co-organized by the Department of Chinese Language and Literature, Peking University, Center for Chinese Linguistics, Peking University, and the Department of Chinese and Bilingual Studies, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University.

The TEAL Workshop was first launched in 1990 at the University of California, Irvine as a mid-size workshop intended to foster research on East Asian linguistics. It has been an important forum for presenting new theories and exchanging novel ideas that bear on East Asian languages with theoretical interests. Since 2002, the TEAL Workshop has been an international event. It was held at Doshisha University, Japan in 2002, at National Tsing Hua University, Taiwan in 2004, at Harvard University, USA in 2005, at The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong in 2007, and at Potsdam University, Germany in 2008.

The TEAL-6 Workshop posted the call for papers on website in January, 2010. Upon the deadline for abstract submissions (15 March, 2010), a total of 134 abstracts were received, representing 18 countries and areas such as Australia, Bangladesh, Belgium, Canada, China (Mainland, Hong Kong and Taiwan), France, Germany, Japan, Malaysia, Russia, Singapore, South Korea, Thailand, The United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United States. To ensure a quality workshop, each abstract was blinded and assigned to a minimum of 3 reviewers. Finally, 20 abstracts with the highest average review scores were accepted for presentation, with the research topics ranging over syntax, phonology/phonetics, semantics, language acquisition, and experimental linguistics.

There were 25 authors/co-authors attending the workshop to present their papers. In addition, more than 200 young scholars and graduate students enthusiastically participated in the workshop. Prof. Dingxu Shi, the Executive Deputy Director of The Hong Kong Polytechnic University-Peking University Research Centre on Chinese Linguistics, delivered a speech at the opening ceremony, giving an overall briefing on TEAL-6 and addressing a hearty welcome to all the presenters and participants. A closing speech of TEAL-6 was delivered by Prof. C.-T. James Huang of the Department of Linguistics, Harvard University. Prof. Huang expressed his sincere appreciations to all the contributors and the organizing committee of TEAL-6 and warmly encouraged young scholars to persistently explore more linguistic mysteries in the future.

The 43rd International Conference on Sino-Tibetan Language and Linguistics (ICSTLL-43)

Date: October 16-18, 2010

Venue: Lund University, Lund, Sweden

The annual 'Sino-Tibetan' conference traditionally offers a forum for descriptively oriented work on this language family. The conference takes a broad view of Sino-Tibetan, welcoming contributions on Tai-Kadai and Miao-Yao languages as well as Tibeto-Burman and Chinese. Indeed, as Sun Hongkai pointed out in his opening address, such a broad view (dating back to Li Fang-Kuei) remains widely held among mainland scholars.

Languages discussed included Bai, Erkai, Green Hmong, Jinghpo, Jino, Kiranti, Khumi, Lahu, Lisu, Naxi, Nisu, nDrapa, Sorbung Tangut and Zhuang, as well as several varieties of Tibetan and Chinese. Hong Kong was represented by Picus Ding, Pan Yanhong, Virginia Yip and Stephen Matthews.

A special event was the symposium devoted to the Swedish sinologist Bernhard Karlgren (1889-1978). The occasion was the publication of Göran Malmqvist's biography Bernhard Karlgren: Portrait of a Scholar, which appeared in Swedish in 1995 and is due to appear in English in late 2010. As Karlgren's 'favorite pupil' Malmqvist recalled studying with him in the 1940s and reviewed the formative years of his career. Sun Hongkai evaluated Karlgren's influence on historical linguistics in China, while Tan Huiying discussed his thinking about language. William Baxter reviewed

Karlgren's landmark reconstruction of Archaic Chinese, noting that despite being hampered by a pre-phonemic view of phonology, many aspects of his reconstruction had been vindicated in subsequent work.

第十屆粵語討論會

The Tenth Workshop on Cantonese (WOC-10)

時間： 2010年11月13日

地點： 香港中文大學

「第十屆粵語討論會」(WOC-10)在2010年11月13日(星期六)於香港中文大學潤昌堂舉行，由香港語言學學會和香港中文大學中國語言及文學系粵語研究中心聯合主辦。

首次的粵語討論會在2000年舉辦，到了2010年已經有十年的歷史。趁這次慶祝粵語討論會十周年的機會，主辦單位希望能夠回顧過去十年學界曾提出過的理論和研究方法，前瞻今後十年粵語研究的新方向。為了讓我們的同行、同學對粵語研究有新的認識，這次討論會的主題定為「粵語語法學的新視野」，特別強調粵語語法學研究的「新」。所報告的論文一共有九篇，主要圍繞以下這幾方面的語言學問題，發表己見：一、形式句法學和語義學在粵語研究方面的新發現；二、粵語區不同方言比較研究的新角度；三、粵語歷時研究的新方向；四、粵語習得研究的新發現；五、粵語語法新領域的探索。

第十屆粵語討論會的召集人鄧思穎首先代表香港語言學學會和中大中文系粵語研究中心向與會者簡介粵語討論會的緣起，並介紹籌辦這次討論會的宗旨。

接下來是九篇論文的報告，上午一共有三篇：香港教育學院語言資訊科學研究中心鄒嘉彥的講題是「從社會語言學角度看珠三角地區以外的粵語族群」，介紹了海南三亞、廣西百色、南寧、玉林等地社會語言學調查的方法和主要發現。香港教育學院語言資訊科學研究中心錢志安的講題是「粵語的三維研究方法」，從粵語的歷時、共時、地域等三方面，探討粵語語法的問題，例如雙賓句/與格句的語法特點。香港城市大學中文、翻譯及語言學系郭必之的講題是「粵語家族大分裂的原因：外在因素」，以南寧粵語的「非廣府片」語法特點為例，說明語言接觸怎樣驅動語法結構產生演變。

下午一共有六篇報告：香港中文大學中國語言及文學系鄧思穎的講題是「當粵語遇上句法學——點解做？點樣做？做咩乜？」，簡述句法學在粵語的研究與應用，並嘗試回答三個問題：一、為甚麼從句法學角度研究粵語？二、怎樣研究粵語的句法？三、有甚麼課題可以研究？香港中文大學中國語言及文學系歐陽偉豪的講題是「街頭巷尾日常用語的『小題大做』」，嘗試解說如何從一些街頭巷尾的片言隻字，揭示粵語背後的規律法則，繼而發展成為嚴肅的粵語語言學研究。香港科技大學人文學部姚玉敏的講題是「粵語歷史語法研究綜述」，簡述過去粵語歷史語法研究的參考文獻和重要著作，並且以粵語「起上嚟」一語，討論語言變化的軌跡及其研究方法。香港城市大學中文、翻譯及語言學系李寶倫的講題是「語義學與粵語研究有交叉點嗎？——從粵語動詞詞綴及句末助詞出發」，以粵語的量化、添加助詞「埋」、「晒」和「添」為例，說明語義在這些助詞釋義上所起的作用，以及語義學理論對粵語語法研究的重要性。香港大學教育學院練美兒的講題是「Grammatical Metaphor in Cantonese and Cantonese as an Academic Language」，討論粵語的一些語法隱喻在教學語言應用的問題。香港中文大學語言學及現代語言系李行德的講題是「為甚麼研究兒童語言？」，以粵語兒童如何習得句末助詞、名詞短語結構、動詞後綴等現象，論說兒童語言研究對瞭解語言和思維具有極大的參考價值，而兒童粵語研究對保存本土文化、了解本土歷史、認識文化認同等方面都有重要意義。

除了這九位發言人以外，香港中文大學中國語言及文學系丘寶怡、香港城市大學中文、翻譯及語言學系片岡新、香港大學語言學系丁思志獲邀請主持討論，而出席當天討論會的同行、同學非常踴躍，討論氣氛熱烈，有很好的互動交流。

會後決定第十一屆粵語討論會(WOC-11)將於2011年3月5日(星期六)假香港教育學院舉行，由香港語言學學會主辦，香港教育學院語言資訊科學研究中心贊助，主題是「粵語名詞性成份的句法和語義」。

Research Centre on Linguistics and Information Sciences (RCLIS) Hong Kong Institute of Education 香港教育學院 語言資訊科學研究中心

In the summer of 2010 the Hong Kong Institute of Education's Research Centre on Linguistics and Language Information Sciences (RCLIS) was established with the relocation of most staff members from the Language Information Sciences Research Centre of City University of Hong Kong.

The research efforts at RCLIS will be enhanced by the organization and establishment of two new constituent laboratories: Corpus Linguistics Laboratory and Language Development Laboratory.

RCLIS will continue to welcome more scholars and staff members with a widening variety of disciplinary backgrounds suited for our research on linguistics and language information sciences.

Below are some of the latest research developments of RCLIS:

- 1) Continuous cultivation of the Chinese synchronous and homothematic corpus, LIVAC (<http://www.livac.org>), which now contains 1.5 million word types on the basis of 400 million Chinese characters drawn mostly from newspaper texts from six major Chinese speaking communities (Beijing, Hong Kong, Macau, Shanghai, Singapore and Taipei) since 1995. A number of related publications have followed from these efforts, such as:

- a. Provision of neologism entries drawn from LIVAC for The Oxford-Chinese Dictionary [<http://www.oupchina.com.hk/ocd/>] published by Oxford University Press in September 2010.

- b. The Global Dictionary on Chinese Neologisms 《全球華語新詞語詞典》 published by Commercial Press, Beijing, in September 2010, is based exclusively on LIVAC and support from Chilin Star company in Zhuhai. [<http://www.ied.edu.hk/rclis/view.php?secid=1176&lang=en>]
- 2) Continuous elaboration of search engines and algorithms to enable meaningful parallel linguistic comparison and mediation between bilingual and technical texts in special domains. These have been applied to (3) and (4) below.
 - 3) Optimization on ACKER (<https://acker.chilin.hk/>), the first computerized platform for the automatic alignment of parallel Classical-Colloquial Chinese texts, whose launching in March 2010 was well received. (for trial, please login with your temporary username: test3390 and password: test3390)
 - 4) Mining of parallel Chinese-English sentences drawn from comparable Chinese-English bilingual patent documents. This has led to the provision of a benchmark corpus and the joint organization in respect of an international competition on Chinese-English Machine Translation by the National Institute of Information and

Communication Technology (NICT) in Tokyo and RCLIS later this year. [<http://ntcir.nii.ac.jp/PatentMT/>]

- 5) Development of innovative web-based and cellphone-based intelligent language learning games involving the ubiquitous and all important 4-character idiomatic expressions in Chinese. Negotiations are underway for professional and industrial support. Trial games are currently available on the android platform. [http://www.rclis.ied.edu.hk/cms/games/cwp_flash/] (for trial, please login with your temporary username: test3390 and password: test3390)
- 6) Following 4 years of intensive fieldwork involving more than 7,000 Primary 3 to Secondary 3 students in Hainan and Guangxi, we have completed a major research project on the quantitative and qualitative analysis of language drift and language shift under rapid urbanization there, with relevant findings for Hong Kong. [http://www.rclis.ied.edu.hk/cms/photo_album/fieldwork/]
- 7) We have been actively working on the production of a new and major dictionary 《全球華語詞典》 based on LIVAC and with collaboration from two universities outside Hong Kong as well as commercial support. Please look out for further update in the near future.
- 8) We will organize two international conferences in 2011, one on corpus linguistics and the other on digital language learning and teaching, all in the context of Chinese, and the Eleventh Workshop on Cantonese (WOC-11) in early March with the Linguistic Society of Hong Kong. [<http://www.swtang.net/woc2011.php>]
- 9) The 2010 LIVAC Annual Celebrity Roster and New Word Roster have been just released! [<http://www.livac.org/celebrity> and <http://www.livac.org/newword>]
- 10) RCLIS is spearheading the preparation of a new MA course in Educational Linguistics and Communication Sciences for both language teachers and speech therapists to be introduced at HKIEd in September 2011.

To keep track of these and other developments, such as the release of the new edition of the Language Atlas of China, please visit RCLIS's website at <http://www.ied.edu.hk/rclis>.

 Title: 'Perfective paradox': A cross-linguistic study of the aspectual functions of -guo in Mandarin Chinese
 Journal: Chinese Language and Discourse 1 (2)
 Publication Year: 2010
 Abstract: The toneless aspect mark -guo is generally viewed as a perfective marker with experiential function. It appears to be subject to a number of semantic constraints, such as discontinuity, repeatability or recurrence, reversibility, and indefinite reference. This article demonstrates that 'experiential' is only one of the three main local functions of -guo. Crucial to the determination of the local function of a -guo clause is the boundedness of the verb constellation: 'experiential' (atelic situation, typically Activity verbs), 'deresultative' (telic situation, typically Accomplishment and Achievement verbs), and 'ex-habitual' (stative verbs). We will first elucidate these three local functions and clarify various semantic constraints of -guo before examining a small corpus of 300 -guo sentences to ascertain the distribution of its local functions in authentic texts. Then we will analyze how these functions are manifested in other languages. The evidence suggests that -guo is untypical as a perfective marker; rather, cross-linguistically the lexico-grammatical exponents of the experiential, deresultative, and ex-habitual functions suggest that -guo behaves more like a perfect marker, hence the 'perfective paradox'. This paper is intended to be a contribution to general and contrastive aspectology.

Title: The Syntax of Non-verbal Predication in Mandarin Chinese
Institution: Department of Chinese and Bilingual Studies, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University
Supervisor: Sze-Wing TANG
Co-supervisor: Dingxu SHI
Year: 2009
Abstract:

The central issue of this study is nominal predication in Mandarin Chinese, which specifically refers to the construction composed of a subject and a nominal predicate without the intervention of a copula. Based on Davidson's (1967) event theory, especially the neo-Davidsonian event theory (Parsons 1990; Chierchia 1995, among many others), which claims that each sentence is endowed with a Davidsonian event/state argument, this study intends to give a unified account to the copulaless nominal predication construction in Mandarin Chinese, i.e., the grammaticality of the nominal predicate construction is dependent on whether the Davidsonian argument is visible or not.

Three types of nominal predicate constructions are examined, namely, the constructions whose predicates are temporal/locative nominals, modified noun phrases and possessive noun phrases. The three types of copulaless nominal predication constructions, distinctive as their syntactic manifestations are, have one thing in common: the Davidsonian argument has to be realized via assorted morpho-syntactic devices. To be specific, the Davidsonian argument of the temporal/locative nominal predicate construction is articulated by means of the spelt-out of the spatio-temporal argument; The realization of the Davidsonian argument of the modified nominal predication construction is dependent on the occurrence of non-intersective modifiers; The possessive nominal predicate construction takes advantage of the interplay between the temporal argument in the matrix clause and that of the possessive DP.

By examination to the nominal predication construction in Mandarin Chinese, it is revealed that nominal predication is parallel to verbal predication in that both of them require the visibility of the Davidsonian argument. Furthermore, it suggests that nominal predication in Mandarin Chinese is no different from English nominal predication. The only distinction between Mandarin Chinese and English lies in their different strategies to realize the Davidsonian argument: English puts all the workload on the spelt-out of tense, while Chinese tends to take advantage of different morpho-syntactic ways so long as the Davidsonian argument can be made visible. This indicates that nominal predication in Chinese is not language particular.

Project Title: An Emendation to Wang Niansun's Dushu Zazhi (王念孫《讀書雜誌》 輯正)

Source of Funding: GRF 2009/10

Abstract:

The prestigious Qing dynasty linguists, Wang Niansun (王念孫) and Wang Yinzhi (王引之) (father and son), are two of the leading figures in Chinese philology. Their Dushu Zazhi (《讀書雜誌》), which contains over 5000 case studies of linguistic issues identified from various Chinese classics, has long been regarded as one of the most authoritative works in the literature of the field. Since its publication, Dushu Zazhi has been used as an essential reference by Chinese philologists and researchers working in classical Chinese philology. While Dushu Zazhi is comprehensive and meticulous in its analyses, a number of inaccuracies have been found in their discussions, such as those on loan characters, semantics and syntax. There has not been any work that attempts to provide a systematic rectification of these issues. This project is an attempt to revisit each case study in Dushu Zazhi from the perspectives of documentology, etymology, semantics, phonology, and syntax, and provide possible rectification of these "errors."

Project Title: A Semantic Investigation into Indexicals -- with a Special Reference to Chinese

Source of Funding: GRF 2009/10

Abstract:

Indexicals are linguistic expressions (such as I, here, now, today, he, she, and that) which have their reference shifting from context to context. For instance, when you use the word 'I', it designates you; when I use the same word, it designates me. As we have seen, indexicals reflect the economy and flexibility of human language, and consequently require one's higher cognitive capability to grasp their meaning. In this project, we will pursue the meaning of indexicals. In his classic paper on Demonstratives, Kaplan claims that indexicals are directly referential: when an indexical is used in a context, it picks out its referent directly, without the mediation of any propositional component as in the Fregean sense. Kaplan takes this to imply that the referent of an indexical is fixed by the actual context of use, and cannot be affected by logical operators. However, this view is challenged by four kinds of cases: (a) sloppily bound 'I' under 'only'; (b) first-person 'de se' belief reports; (c) shifted indexicals; and (d) the phenomenon of deferred reference. After examining these problematic cases, this project argues that indexicals are indeed directly referential, but their interactions with attitude verbs, modal operators as well as quantifiers are far more complicated than that suggested by Kaplan's analysis. After an intensive study of these interactions, we will extend our analysis to the study of Chinese reflexive pronoun 'ziji'. 'Ziji' behaves in a distinct way from other pronouns. It can be used as an indexical, an anaphor and/or a bound variable. Given the fact that there is no appealing interpretation of it yet, we will conduct a comprehensive study from the semantic perspective based on the comparison between 'ziji' and first person indexical 'wo' (I) in Chinese. Finally, we will unify indexicals, anaphors and bound variables in the framework of Discourse Representation Theory (DRT) to achieve the interpretation of pronominal expressions in a single framework. The present research contributes to the general theory of meaning. It will further benefit the relevant theoretical research such as the nature of belief, self-knowledge, first-person perspective and consciousness. The outcomes generated will improve people's understanding of expressions containing indexicals, and consequently help explain how the communication between groups of people comes true and what the cognitive process and mechanism are like when people learn and use language.

Project Title: On the Discontinuous Constructions in Cantonese

Source of Funding: GRF 2009/10

Abstract:

Cantonese is normally regarded as a language that has an unusually rich repertoire of postverbal elements, many of which cannot be found in Mandarin. The question arises as to the syntactic representation of these functional categories and their preverbal counterparts in clausal structure. This project focuses on the syntax of functional categories in Cantonese, concentrating on the discontinuous constructions of functional categories and their dialectal variation under a parametric framework. In this proposed project, I will investigate systematically how a postverbal element in the discontinuous construction interacts with its preverbal counterpart. The descriptive results can be used as a database for future research in Chinese grammar and Chinese dialectology. To account for the empirical findings observed, this project will formulate a syntactic theory of the discontinuous constructions in Cantonese, and identify parameters from which the dialectal variation emerges. The theoretical part of the project will provide a theory of the discontinuous constructions in Cantonese that is grounded on comparative dialectal consideration. The vision behind this proposal is that the differences between Cantonese and Mandarin with respect to the discontinuous constructions can be all traced back to some 'micro-parameters' that will have predictable consequences in a number of constructions in these two dialects. This is a task that has not been taken before. The results are expected to help in fine-tuning the grammatical knowledge of the discontinuous constructions and to enable us to open up a new horizon in the study of functional categories in Chinese at large, resolving some longstanding disputes and controversies surrounding their syntactic nature in Chinese. It is also hoped that the project could provide a perspective from Chinese dialectal grammar on the understanding of the peripheral positions of a sentence in human language, shedding light on the studies of language acquisition and facilitating language learning of Cantonese and Mandarin/standard Chinese.
